The accountant in the office, the teacher in the class, the mechanic in the garage, the parent in the home... Whether paid or unpaid, on a voluntary basis or out of sheer necessity, many members of our congregation spend much of their week engaged in the activity we know as 'work'. This being the case, how might we read Scripture and preach sermons with an alertness to the everyday contexts in which our people find themselves? Join us for this opportunity to reflect together on how preaching equips Christians to live and serve as disciples of Jesus in their places of work.

Antony is Senior Pastor of the Beacon Church, Ashton-in-Makerfield, and Theology Advisor at the London Institute for Contemporary Christianity.
